MEN OF BOSTON

AND

NEW ENGLAND

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PUBLISHERS

BY WAY OF INTRODUCTION

"MEN of Boston and New England" tells its own story.

It goes out into the world of daily newspapers, illustrated weeklies and monthly magazines to fill a want often felt.

It is offered to the reference libraries of publishers as combined, the word and the picture of authority on the foremost citizens of the Northeast.

One word further.

The biographical sketches contained in this book are based upon data furnished by the men themselves.

The pictures are reproductions of recent photographs.

The book is sent out to be of prompt service everywhere when the engraving room is ready, the presses are waiting and a citizen of prominence in New England has suddenly become important in the news of the country.

JOHN SEDGWICK HYDE

BATH IRON WORKS

T the close of the Civil War, Gen. Thomas W. Hyde returned to Bath, Me., his native city, and purchased a small, almost unknown iron foundry. At first the sole business was the making of simple castings, but General Hyde, applying the same peculiar ability that distinguished him in every field, rapidly improved and enlarged his sphere of work. New machinery was added and a machine shop built and he entered the field of building ship machinery such as windlasses, hoisting engines, etc.

In 1884 the Bath Iron Works was organized and in 1889 the Bath Iron Works, Ltd., purchased the plant of the Goss Marine Iron Works at Bath, a plant engaged in the building of marine engines and boilers.

In connection with this plant a shipyard was built, and in April, 1890, the first vessels, other than wood, constructed in Maine were contracted for, the United States gunboats "Machias" and "Castine". The company was successful from a financial and engineering point of view.

The building of vessels' auxiliaries was turned over to a company organized for the purpose and called the Hyde Windlass Company, which company built an entire new plant at Bath for this business.

In 1897 General Hyde was obliged by ill health to retire from the active management of the Bath Iron Works, and his son Edward W. Hyde became President and John S. Hyde, another son, Vice-President.

General Hyde died November 14, 1899. Soon after his death the Bath Iron Works was purchased by the United States Shipbuilding Company, and subsequently became the property, through reorganization, of their successors.

In 1905, John S. Hyde purchased the Bath Iron Works, Ltd., and put new capital into the business, since which time the plant has practically been rebuilt in steel, brick or concrete, wharves extended and new machinery installed.

The present plant consists of offices and drawing rooms with fireproof vaults, building slips, shipyard, punch shop, bending floor and furnaces, machine shop, boiler shop, forge shop, anglesmith shop, coppersmith shop, tinsmith shop, piping and plumbing shop, pattern shop, carpenter shop, paint shop, electricians' shop, mold loft, rigger loft, brass foundry and chemical and testing laboratory; all in modern buildings, equipped with the best and most modern tools and machinery.

The plant is thoroughly equipped with powerful cranes and handling machinery, together with steam, electricity, compressed air and hydraulic power plants.

The company employs about 1000 men in many trades, and has made a specialty of light construction and high speed work, giving particular attention to the most difficult requirements in this line. It was the first company in this country to become licensee for the manufacture of the Parsons marine turbine, of which prime mover it has built over 130,000 horse power.

The company is also licensed to build the Normand water tube boiler, of which they have built about 200,000 horse power.

It has built for the United States Navy, five torpedo boats, ten torpedo boat destroyers, one battleship, one scout cruiser, one protected cruiser, one ram, one practice vessel and four gunboats, and also many high speed yachts and passenger steamers for private owners

The present officers of the Company are: John S. Hyde, President and General Manager; Charles P. Wetherbee, Vice-President and Superintending Engineer; John McInnes, Superintendent of Construction; Hubert H. McCarty, Treasurer; Joseph M. Trott, Secretary and Counsel.

These five comprise the Board of Directors.

THE SLATER FAMILY

HAT the names of Arkwright and Strutt mean to English manufacturers, the name Slater means to the American cotton and woolen industries, for it was Samuel Slater who laid the foundation of the great manufactories that have created most of the wealth of New England.

Today the Slater family owns and operates a great system of woolen and cotton mills, which had their beginnings more than a century ago, and a fourth generation of Slaters is soon to undertake the management of the great business which had its inception in the departure from England in 1789, of Samuel Slater, one of America's most picturesque pioneers. He was the son of William Slater, landed yeoman of Belper, Derbyshire, and had been apprenticed to his father's friend, Jedidiah Strutt, associate of Arkwright, whose inventions revolutionized cotton spinning.

At 17, young Slater had become overseer in Strutt's cotton mills, and had also mastered all of Arkwright's inventions. Before his industrial service with Strutt had ended, the young man had determined to leave England for the new world. He saw farther than most men of his day, and believed that the United States presented a greater field for the textile industry than England afforded.

The reading of an advertisement of an American society offering a reward for the invention of textile machinery, to accomplish what Arkwright had done, was largely instrumental in influencing the lad in his decision. The English government was guarding its industries most zealously, and no skilled mechanic was allowed to leave the country. Young Slater kept his plans to himself, and neither his mother nor his brothers learned of his intentions until he was well out in the ocean.

No person could take passage without being subjected to a thorough search, and severe punishment was meted out to persons detected in attempts to smuggle knowledge in tangible form across the Atlantic. Young Slater, therefore, could take with him to the new world neither drawing nor model.

Upon arriving in America, he offered his services to Moses Brown of Providence, founder of Brown University, whose experiments in making cotton goods by machinery had resulted in failure.

Samuel Slater, from memory, constructed and erected machines that produced yarn equal to that spun in England, and the prosperity of the textile industry in New England was assured.

In 1790 the first commercially successful textile mill in America was established in Pawtucket, R. I., under the firm name of Almy, Brown & Slater. In 1803 Samuel Slater's brother John followed him to America, and together they established other mills, the greatest of the Slater properties, the Webster mills, being founded in 1812.

Soon after the establishment of the first cotton mill in America in 1790, Samuel Slater also founded the first Sunday school in America in Pawtucket.

The 100th anniversary was observed by the city of Pawtucket in 1890 with a whole week's celebration. In 1815, three years after the establishment of the Webster properties, Samuel Slater, in response to a public demand, established another first institution of its kind in America in the form of a woolen mill in Webster. At an early date the United States government called upon him to supply cloth for both army and navy.

Samuel Slater operated the Webster mills almost up to the day of his death in 1835, when he was succeeded by his son, Horatio Nelson Slater. For nearly 45 years, until his retirement in 1888, Horatio N. Slater managed the business, developing it with rapidity and solidity.

His nephew and adopted son, also named Horatio N. Slater, succeeded him, and under the direction of the second Horatio N. Slater, the business almost trebled in volume.

Horatio Nelson Slater, 2d, died August 13, 1899, since which time the mills have been operated by trustees, for the reason that for the first time since the foundation of the business there were no direct heirs of legal age to undertake the management.

Partly because of a tradition that the mills must be retained in the Slater family, and partly because of the incalculable value of the name in connection with cotton and wool manufactures, Mrs. Mabel Hunt Slater, widow of Horatio N. Slater, 2d, strenuously opposed a plan to alienate ownership and after long litigation succeeded in conserving the great mills for her children, who will be invested with their management as soon as they shall have attained their majorities. About 4000 operatives are now employed in the three Webster plants of the corporation and in its Farnumsville branch, and the corporation owns hundreds of tenements, a 250 acre farm, and pays nearly 60 % of the entire tax of the Town of Webster.

CONRAD J. RUETER

H. A. RUETER

THE RUETER FAMILY, BREWERS

IN the front rank of American ale brewing stands the Rueter family,—for two generations active in the production of fine malt beverages and in upbuilding and uplifting the brewing industry.

The family was founded in this country by the late Henry H. Rueter, who came to Boston in 1851, at 18, from Gutersloh, Westphalia, his birthplace. He was of honorable ancestry, uniting the blood of the Rueters and the Von Eickens.

Henry H. Rueter founded the Highland Spring Brewery in 1869, and in three years had made it the largest brewery in the United States and today it still maintains its place as the greatest ale brewery of America.

The present head of the family is Henry A. Rueter, born in Boston, educated in Germany, and now in his fifty-fourth year. He is president of Rueter & Company; and of its affiliated lager beer interest, the A. J. Houghton Company; and is a director in the National Rockland Bank, the American Trust Co., the Roxbury Institution for Savings, and the Mass. Bonding & Ins. Co. He was one of the incorporators of the Mass. Automobile Club, and has served it in various capacities. The Country Club and the Algonquin Club count him among their members, as does the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Rueter was Miss Bertha Glover, only daughter of the late William H. Glover of Rockland, Me. They have two children,—William G. Rueter, now in his final year at Harvard, and Miss Martha Von Eicken Rueter.

A graduate of Harvard, and later a student at Boston Univ. Law School and Bonn University, Germany, Conrad J. Rueter is a recognized authority on the technical and practical application of the liquor law. He has served his city for upwards of seventeen years as trustee of the Boston City Hospital, having been reappointed in 1913 for another five-year term. He belongs to the Boston Art Club, the Puritan Club, and the Harvard Club; and is a member of the Liederkrantz Club of New York. In his fiftieth year, his pleasure in outdoor sport is evidenced by his membership in the Mass. Automobile Club, the Brae Burn Country Club and the Wollaston Golf Club. Mrs. Conrad J. Rueter was Miss Ramseyer. There is one son,—John Conrad Rueter.

At the head of the sales staff is Frederick T. Rueter, and the brewing department itself is in direct charge of Ernest L. Rueter, youngest of the four brothers, as general manager and master-brewer. Both names appear on the rolls of the Boston Athletic Assn. Ernest L. Rueter is also a member of the Country Club. Frederick T. Rueter is unmarried. Mrs. Ernest L. Rueter was Miss Myra Chevalier, and there is one daughter,—Miss Jeanette.

NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

THE New England Conservatory of Music, incorporated in 1870 by a special act of the Legislature of the State of Mass., claims 1853 as the date of its origin, since in that year its founder, Dr. Eben Tourjee, first introduced into America the Conservatory system of musical instruction. In the year 1882, the growing needs of the institution led to the purchase of an estate on Franklin Sq. which it occupied until the close of the school year 1901-2. With the opening of the school year 1902-3, the Conservatory took possession of its new building on Huntington Ave. cor. of Gainsboro St. The Conservatory so arranges its curriculum that all pupils in its regular courses who are studying to be teachers, singers or performers on any instrument, shall pursue these theoretical branches which are most necessary in their particular class, together with their general instrumental or vocal practice. The Conservatory endeavors not only to give the pupil instruction by the most able teachers and modern methods, but to surround him with a musical atmosphere which shall be at once a stimulus and a discipline; also to afford him opportunities for practice teaching and for public performance. The larger auditorium, Jordan Hall, is the gift of Mr. Eben D. Jordan, Pres. of Board of Trustees. It has a seating capacity of over one thousand, and its acoustic properties are exceptionally fine. Here the Conservatory orchestral and Choral concerts and the recitals of the Faculty and advanced students are given. The Conservatory has a faculty numbering over one hundred, and the enrollment for the year 1911-12 was 3006 pupils.

FLANDERS, RALPH L., Mgr. N. E. Conservatory of Music; b. Carroll, Maine; entered business at 19 as bookkeeper and won rapid promotion; in two years became member of firm and later senior partner; accepted position of Asst. Mgr. of N. E. Conservatory of Music in July, 1899, and in Jan. 1904 was elected Manager; was Gen. Mgr. of Boston Opera Company during its organization and is a member of its Board of Directors at present time.

CHADWICK, GEORGE WHITEFIELD, composer and conductor; b. Lowell, Mass., Nov. 13, 1854; s. Alonzo C. and Hannah A. (Fitts) Chadwick; ed. Lawrence, Mass., High School; Olwit College, Mich.; Leipzig Conservatory of Music; Royal Musik School of Munich; Hon. A. M., Yale, 1897 and Tufts, LL. D., 1905. Mr. Chadwick, whose ancestors were of old New England stock, is known as one of the foremost American composers. Among his compositions are "Third Symphony in F major"; "Melpomene" and "Adonais" overtures and String Quartet in D minor, which are probably the best works of their class yet produced in America. As a conductor he has many times led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in his own works besides serving as leader of the Arlington and Boston Orchestral Clubs, the Springfield Festivals and the Worcester Festivals; mem. of Concordia Soc. of Leipzig, Germany; Amer. Acad. Arts and Letters; Royal Inst. of Music, Florence, Italy; Brooklyn Inst.; Univ. Club of Litchfield, Conn.; Orpheus Club of Phila.; St. Botolph and Tavern Clubs of Boston; Harvard Musical Assn., etc.

THE Union Twist Drill Company was organized in 1895. At that time its employees numbered 43. From the start the business of the company has doubled every two years and the employees now exceed 1,000 in number. The Union Twist Drill Company is the owner of the S. W. Card Manufacturing Co., of Mansfield, Mass., organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, with a capital of $3,000,000, which is and has been for forty years the leading maker of taps for cutting screw threads. Also it owns Butterfield & Company, a corporation with a capital of $2,000,000, organized under the laws of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, engaged in the manufacture of taps and dies at Derby Line, Vermont, and Rock Island, Canada. The Union Twist Drill Company is now the largest maker of milling cutters in the world and holds a leading position in the small tool trade, including twist drills, taps and dies. A large portion of the product is exported.

TO mention The L. S. Starrett Co., in the presence of workers in metal or wood, is to suggest tools of the finest quality and of absolute precision. Behind this reputation stands a personality that is an inspiration and a confirmation of optimism,—the personality of L. S. Starrett. The bare facts of his life are in themselves a complete novel of successful achievement.

L. S. Starrett was born 25 April, 1836, in China, Me. The sixth child in a family of twelve, his early education was such as a country school afforded in the intervals of farm labor. In 1861 he married Lydia Bartlett, and settled on a 600 acre farm. His leisure moments were used in experimenting, and he invented a washing machine, a butter worker, and a meat chopper. In 1868, Mr. Starrett moved to Athol, where the Athol Machine Co. was organized to make these inventions.

Sometime later he went into business for himself and began to make the Starrett combination square, comprising sliding rule, square, mitre, and level, and this tool made the name of Starrett famous and was the foundation of his lasting success. One invention followed another until to-day the Starrett tools are in use all over the world. They now require a catalogue of 320 closely printed pages, and the factory has over five acres of floor space, employs 800 men, and is the largest in the world devoted exclusively to the manufacture of small tools. Its products are sold direct to the hardware trade by fifteen salesmen in America and two in Europe, with stores in New York, Chicago and London.

The business was incorporated 1 Jan., 1900.

The town of Athol owes much to Mr. Starrett. He has recently presented to the town valuable land on Main street as sites for a Library building and a Town Hall; and the Athol Y. M. C. A. was made possible by his gifts of $35,000 and the site for the building, which was formerly occupied by his first machine shop.

FARR ALPACA COMPANY, HOLYOKE, MASS.
Employs over 3,000 people and makes 16,000 miles of cloth per year

FARR ALPACA COMPANY

HOLYOKE, MASS.

N the summer of 1874, when the protective tariff first became effective in the United States, Herbert M. Farr, a Canadian manufacturer, realizing the numerous benefits which would be derived from a dress goods mill in this country, started on a prospecting tour, seeking a location for such an establishment. He was accompanied by his brother-in-law, Joseph Metcalf. The desired location was found at Holyoke, Mass.

With the assistance of D. H. Newton of Holyoke, the Farr Alpaca Company was established. Like many other large industries this great textile company started in a modest way with a small factory, employing about four hundred employees. The promoters of the new company held their meeting for organization in the old Holyoke House, now the Hotel Hamilton, on November 3, 1873. These officers were elected: Jared Beebe, President; Herbert M. Farr, Treasurer; Directors, Jared Beebe, J. C. Parsons, H. M. Farr, Anderson Allyn, Joseph Metcalf, George Randall and Timothy Merrick.

The new concern had great difficulty at first to sell its stock. The times were hard. There were some who looked at the matter as at the best a speculative venture, and no one dreamed of the growth that the coming years were to bring to this industry.

The company had only been in existence about two years when the Centennial Exposition was held at Philadelphia in 1876. Its Exhibit received a Medal of Award, the Judge of the Exhibit being Henry Mitchell of Bradford, England, an acknowledged expert. When Mr. Mitchell submitted his report, he said, "The undersigned having examined the products herein described, respectfully recommends the same to the United States Centennial Commission for award for the following reasons: For an excellent exhibit of Black Alpacas, Mohairs, Cashmeres and Serges; all of superior manufacture, very regular in quality, evenly spun and woven and of permanent color and finish."

Soon afterwards, the company sent out a circular to the trade announcing its adherence to the policy that has since made it famous all over this country and beyond. This announcement read: "This company is determined to maintain its position at the head of this industry and will continue to spare neither effort nor expense to meet the requirements of the best trade." The success of the company is due to a strict adherence to this policy.

The product of the Farr Alpaca Company consists of worsted dress goods and of coat linings. Its market is the whole United States, the prohibitions of the tariff operating at present preventing its field from being universal. The worsted goods are made from extra long combed wool, also from wool from the Angora Goat of Asiatic Turkey and the Alpaca Sheep of Peru and a species of the Llama. This company was the first to manufacture all wool Cashmeres and Henriettas and the first to make serge linings to compete with those made in Bradford, England.

In the present plant, which consists of three large mills, no less than three thousand people are employed. Fifty-one miles of cloth a day or over sixteen thousand miles a year are woven. Over six million pounds of wool are used annually to run these plants; 7388 horse power is required, 1080 being water power and the rest steam power.

Joseph Metcalf, the present treasurer and agent of the Farr Alpaca Company, is the only living member of the original board of directors. He was born in Leeds, England, March 24, 1841.

In 1851, when his father was partially disabled by an accident to his eyes, he was adopted by an uncle, who resided in Hamilton, Canada, and who in that year was on a visit to England to attend the first great World's Fair at the Crystal Palace in London.

The lad received his early education at private and public schools in Hamilton, but at the age of sixteen he entered the service of the Great Western Railway of Canada, now merged with the Grand Trunk Railway. Beginning at the bottom, he filled in succession every position in the combined office of Traffic Auditor and General Ticket Agent, becoming the head of that department when he was twenty-two years old. He was subsequently made Chief Accountant, combining his former office with that of General Accountant, and in 1873 he was made treasurer of the company.

In 1868 he married Miss Clara W. Farr, sister of the late Herbert M. Farr, with whom he was associated in founding the Farr Alpaca Company.

In 1874, Mr. Metcalf withdrew from railway life and went to Holyoke, where he had accepted the office of treasurer of the Farr Alpaca Company. The success of this company may be safely ascribed to the untiring devotion of Mr. Farr and

Mr. Metcalf to every detail of the business. Since the death of Mr. Farr in 1900, Mr. Metcalf has combined the office of Agent and Treasurer.

Mr. Metcalf was always an ardent protectionist and allied himself with the Republican party. He did not vote in Canada until protection was the battle cry and it happened that the candidate he voted for was the first so-called labor candidate in the country. He has made several visits to Washington in connection with tariff revision and in the revision of 1883, he worked with the officers of the Wool Manufacturers' Association in securing separate classifications for all wool dress goods, which previous to that date had been grouped with the cheaper cotton warp goods. The Farr Alpaca Company had at that time installed a plant for making all wool cashmeres, being the first company in the United States to spin and weave yarns made on the so-called French system.

Mr. Metcalf has never aspired to any political office, but has held offices in the Home Market Club and the National Association of Wool Manufacturers. He has never cared for club life except such as encouraged outdoor sports. He has always been an enthusiastic golfer, autoist and canoe club member, sports which he delighted in because he could enjoy them with his children.

He is an attendant at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Holyoke, and has always given freely to its support and to the many benevolent associations of his city. His sympathy with labor has been shown by the several voluntary increases in wages which have been given to the employees of the Farr Alpaca Company during the past fifteen years.

It has always been his ambition to make his employees the best paid in the world in their line of work and in this he has succeeded.

He has two sons, Frank H., assistant agent and assistant treasurer of the Farr Alpaca Company, and Howard F., superintendent of the finishing mill of that company. Mr. Metcalf's one daughter is Mrs. Addison L. Green.

HIS company was organized in the year 1900 by the seven sons of the late Herbert M. Warren of Newton, Mass. (Albert C., Herbert M., Henry J., George C., Frederick J., Walter B., and Ralph L. Warren), the father being one of six brothers celebrated in their time as associated in lines of business analogous to that of the Warren Bros. Co.: and as inventors of the gravel roof. One of the elder generation was the first to pump oil from wells to railroad through pipe line, the point to which he delivered the oil to the railroad being then known as "Warren Landing," now the City of Warren, Pa. The elder generation of Warrens did business in New York and Boston as Warren Bros. Oil Co., Warren Chemical & Mfg. Co., Warren Roofing Co., Warren Color Co., and the Warren Scharf Asphalt Paving Co., and were also organizers of the N. E. Felt Roofing Co. As these names show, the earlier as well as the present generation were engaged in the development of the oil, asphalt and coal tar industries, and especially in their application to roofs and pavements, in all of which lines the present company is actively engaged. Its chief business is the laying of pavement known as "Bitulithic" under patents issued to Frederick John Warren, Pres. of the Co., from its organization until his death in February, 1905. The Bitulithic pavement was first adopted in the City of Pawtucket, R. I., in 1901, and up to the close of the year 1912 has been adopted in more than 275 cities of the United States and Canada, ranging in climatic conditions from Edmonton, Province of Alberta, Can., to El Paso, Texas, and to the extent of over 25,000,000 sq. yds., being equivalent to over 1,400 miles of roadway 30 ft. wide between curbs. Bitulithic is defined in Webster's New International Dictionary as "designating a kind of paving the main body of which consists of broken stone cemented together with bitumen or asphalt - n. Bitulithic pavement." Bitulithic which is laid under the patents of Warren Bros. Company, is distinctly different from other forms of asphalt pavement in that the wearing surface is composed of a combination of crushed stone, varying in size from about one inch to impalpable powder, the several sizes being so proportioned that each receding size is used in the quantity required to fit in the voids or air spaces between the coarser particles. The result of this gradation is that the "mineral aggregate" thus produced is within 10% of the density of solid rock. The "mineral aggregate" is heated to a temperature of about 300 degrees, mixed with pure asphalt also in a heated condition, in such quantity as to coat every particle of the stone and thoroughly fill the remaining voids in the aggregate. The advantages claimed for the Bitulithic pavement over the standard asphalt pavement or any of its modifications, are: Greater stability and consequent durability; Better foothold; Greater resiliency; More thoroughly waterproof and therefore more sanitary. George Copp Warren, Pres. of the Company since 1905, was born in West Newton, Mass., Sept. 1, 1863. After graduation from the Newton High School, he took up work in the manufactory of his father and uncles in New York, where asphalt and coal tar materials were refined and roofing and paving and coal tar coloring materials produced. Subsequently, in the year 1884, he entered the field of asphalt paving as foreman for the Warren Scharf Asphalt Paving Company, and advanced to General Supt. of the business of that company throughout the United States and Canada, which position he filled from the years 1895 to 1901 inclusive, when he became associated with the then newly organized Warren Brothers Company. Mr. Warren is a member of the Puritan Club and Boston City Club of Boston, Longwood Cricket Club of Chestnut Hill (in which suburb he resides), the Boston Chamber of Commerce, The Sons of the Revolution, American Society of Municipal Improvements, The American Society of Engineering Contractors, American Society for Testing Materials, American Road Builders' Association, American Highway Association, Permanent International Association of Road Congresses, National Association Road Material and Machinery Manufacturers, and Massachusetts Highway Association.
